Chaim Sternthal of Laniado Hospital writes:

This past year has been very challenging to say the least. From day one, October 7th, 2023, Laniado Hospital has been on the forefront of saving lives of injured soldiers and civilians. Our work has been nonstop and on overdrive from the Gaza strip and more recently in Lebanon.

Our attention this year is to build the New Sheltered Emergency Hospital that is most needed at this time.

We look forward to seeing you at our annual event on December 17th at the Simon Wiesenthal Center. We will be honoring Rabbi Yekusiel and Hindi Kalmenson and Salvador and Nina Litvak. The Stanley Diller Chesed Award will be given to Rabbi Dr. Jason and Lauren Weiner. Our special guest is Ms. Noam Ben David, October 7th Nova Festival survivor.

Note that Laniado's West Coast board includes several YIHP members. See flyer for details.

Count Your Blessings

Rabbi Yochanan Zweig

Yitzchak sowed in the land and that year he reaped a hundredfold; Hashem had blessed him" (26:12)

The Midrash points out that by stating that the produce was a hundredfold, the implication is that the produce was counted.¹ This, however, contradicts the dictum set forth by the Talmud which states that one should not count his possessions, for blessing does not rest on that which has been weighed, measured, or counted.² The Midrash concludes that Yitzchak counted the produce for the purpose of tithing - a mitzvah.

Based upon this Midrash, the Rambam credits Yitzchak with instituting tithing.³ The Raavad disagrees, pointing out that the concept of tithing already existed in the days of Avraham; after the war against the four kings, Avraham gave one-tenth of the spoils to Malkitzedek, who was the priest at that time.⁴ Therefore, the Raavad concludes that it was Avraham, not Yitzchak who instituted tithing.⁵

Perhaps the Rambam would make the following distinction: One of the functions of tithing is to show that we understand that all we have belongs to Hashem. When a person tithes, he makes a statement that the produce is not a result of "kochi v'otsem yadi" – "the strength of my actions", rather it is a blessing from Hashem. The spoils that Avraham tithed were a result of a completely miraculous occurrence, his victory against incredible odds. One could think that it is only under such circumstances that tithing would be necessary. The notion that even when a person applies his own efforts in a natural manner the product is still a blessing from Hashem, is only clear when Yitzchak tithes, for Yitzchak plants and reaps in a non-miraculous manner. Therefore, he is credited with the institution of tithing.
